

Thursday 9th September – Session One (& Only): The Squeeze

This is a proper party. No deals, no negotiations ... just a great opportunity to get together as a collective - re-connect, rejoice and re-inspire each other.

Friday 10th September – Rise & Shine!

(registration from 8am for a 8:45am start)

Session One - Ground Work

Co-Chairs Helen Masters & Pen Naish	Welcome, acknowledgments, waiata
Dame Anne Salmond Our national treasure is joining again! Anthropologist and historian, best known for her writings on New Zealand history and her efforts to improve intercultural understanding between Māori and Pakeha, she's also from a Gisborne wine industry family, so there's really no one better to talk us about what makes us, us!	Turangawaewae: How has our place shaped and informed us?
Mike Taitoko Mike is of Maniapoto descent and co-founder and CEO of Takiwā, an award-winning data analytics and visualisation company focusing on agriculture, land-use and environmental impacts. He is also a co-founder of Toha, an impact investment platform designed to support environmental initiatives and is currently acting CEO of Calm the Farm, a regenerative ag investment platform.	Kaitiakitanga: Mike will talk about emergence of environmental custodianship, what is happening in other industries and why is it important to us.

Smoko! - Idea inoculation

Session Two - Fermentation

Professor Tim Flannery An internationally acclaimed scientist, explorer and conservationist, Professor Flannery is one of the world's leading writers on climate change and was named Australian of the Year in 2007. nature.	The global view... Tim will talk about earth system sciences - reminding us of exactly what is at stake and pointing us towards possible ways of reconciling agriculture with nature.
Suky Thompson Is a dedicated conservationist on Banks' Peninsula and Manager of the Rod Donald Banks Peninsula Trust. This trust has recently purchased Te Ahu Pātiki on the Port Hills, with the aim to facilitate natural regeneration of native forest, biodiversity and public access.	Playing the long game... Suky will discuss the trusts vision of natural regeneration of forests, the ETS and the importance of this to the idea of Kiatiakitanga. Whanaungatanga: Kinship, relationships, family culture. Farming for ourselves and our community. The importance of connecting with our communities and land - building resilience and success.

Luncho! - Idea digestion

Session Three - Bench trialling

Nick Stock, Dan Sims We're fortunate to be able to bring across two of Australia's leading winos. These guys don't need a lot of introduction, ...writers, educators, observers - they're coming to share what's happening across the ditch.	What's happening across the ditch? The good and the less good. What trends are emerging in finding their culture, understanding their place?
Emma Jenkins MW, Dr Chris Howard Judy Finn and Hatch Kalberer A MW, an anthropologist interested in the biocultural aspects of wine and two pioneers of the NZ wine industry all on the couch.	They'll help us reflect on our history to this point, the lessons learnt, and key elements that will inform and direct our future. What is our cultural reference point as New Zealanders. Confidence to move on from Burgundy.

Afternoon leg stretch! - blending

Session Four - Maturation

Professor Tim Flannery Tim Flannery with NZ industry leaders - Tim re-joins New Zealand captains of industry to discuss how NZ business is adjusting to new environments:	What can we learn from other industries? Sustainability and NZ in a global context. How important is Pinot Noir to New Zealand? What might the next Pinot Noir NZ event look like?
Wine Tasting – a self-pour tasting of 2019 Pinot Noir from every region of New Zealand	